ABILITIES

I am confident in my strong data-driven thinking and analytical skill after devising financial plans for 10 fundraising events and managing a data list of nearly 600 potential sponsors during the time working in Students' Association of Philanthropy, Youths' Organization of Social Care and Improvement and Entelier Project. Moreover, I thrive in academically challenging environments (achieving a high score of 1560 in the SAT Test) with a fast speed of learning and a strong skill of applying theoretical lessons into practical situations.

ASPIRATION

I aspire to use data to spread empathy and love, healing the pains left by pressing issues coming in rapid succession, such as conflicts, natural disasters and pollution. Utilizing art as a unique method of data visualization, I aim to create an interactive virtual space where humane values can be amplified and disseminated. Furthermore, I also desire to be a Data Analyst in Google, where I can leverage data to improve searching tools and predict consumer behaviors while also taking the environmental sustainability and social responsibilities into consideration when devising business plans.

CREATIVITY

Becoming the Head of Finance and External Relations of Students' Association of Philanthropy, I pioneered a data-driven sponsorship model by analyzing past donor records, facilitating a 256% fund increase compared to the previous stage, and doubling sponsorship funds in a reduced timeframe. These achievements have greatly contributed to the success of the association's charitable visit to a remote school in Thai Nguyen at the end of our stage.

COMMITMENT

Motivated by a desire to find like-minded friends and promote Japanese cultural values to more people, I specifically led a team of 7 members and supervised the activities of CJC, a 26-member club, to organize cultural meetings and 2 main events. Nearly 1 year in this role, I have leveraged all of my previous experience and relationships to attract 20% more visitors to our "The Eastern Cultural Festival" in comparison to the last season. To perform my best, I even applied for renowned projects such as Scribbles to get myself acquainted with a professional environment and learn more about bonding methods and leadership.

ABOUT ME

A young possibility-hunter who can notice unobtrusive opportunities hiding behind common situations, I could resolve unexpected problems in a flexible manner and leverage data to create unpredictable increases in funds in my charitable projects, leading to a raised donation to people in need. With an intention to become a Data Analyst in Google, I aim to devise innovative plans that can improve people's experience in searching tools and technology, as well as contribute to the betterment of our society, using available data.
